I served one term as a teaching staff in board of governors. The service provided me with a good opportunity to reflect the needs of our teaching and research activities and support the academic framework that needs to be maintained in any strategic planning for the university. Considering the overall business-oriented nature of the external board members, I believe my direct feedbacks with the views and perspectives of our academic body were often beneficial. I was successful to represent the needs of our faculty members on several matters. I wish to continue working on them to follow-up and elaborate further.
