

Advancing Disability Rights Around the World

Wednesday, September 14, 12:00 – 1:30pm EDT

Persons with disability are entitled to free and equal access to healthcare, mental health supports, and rehabilitation. They deserve the tools and resources to live full lives in community. Learn from leaders of international organizations how to ground disability research in a human rights framework, and how rights-based approaches to disability service provision contend with impoverishment, government responsibility, and colonial and imperial histories.

This event is Part One of the four-part virtual speaker series Advocates Assembly: Disability Research from the Ground Up. Each event this fall will ask disability justice activists and disability-centered service providers how to frame the future of disability and rehabilitation research.
